

ENGAGING THE WORLD: Leading the Conversation on the Significance of Race

Lecture Series

'Saving' Le Van Minh: Humanitarianism &
Policymaking for the Amerasians of Vietnam

Wednesday, March 3, 2021

5:00 p.m. (PST)

Zoom Link: chapman.zoom.us/j/92395907760

Guest Speaker: Dr. Sabrina Thomas,
Associate Professor of History, Wabash College

Introductions by: Dr. Kyle Longley, Director of MA War & Society, Chapman University

Moderator: Dr. Angelica Allen, Director, Africana Studies minor, Chapman University

Sabrina Thomas is an Associate Professor of History at Wabash College. Her research specializes in US Foreign Policy with a transnational focus on the intersections of race, nation, and war through the legacies of children born from international conflict. She is the author of "Blood Politics: Reproducing the Children of 'Others' in the 1982 Amerasian Immigration Act" (Journal of American-East Asian Relations, 2019) and "Scholarship During the Coronavirus Pandemic" (Diplomatic History, 2021). Her first book, The Scars of War: The Politics of Paternity and Responsibility for the Amerasians of Vietnam, is forthcoming with the University of Nebraska Press (2021).

Please contact Dr. Kyle Longley, longley@chapman.edu, if you have questions.

For more information on the Engaging the World series, visit our website www.chapman.edu/wilkinson/about/events/engaging-world.aspx