Who we are

“Committed to ecology, social justice, grassroots democracy and non-violence, Greens are renewing democracy in the United States through community-based organizing without the support of corporate donors.”

Key points in recent history

The Green Party of the United States began as the Association of State Green Parties and was formed after the 1996 elections to fill a void in national Green politics and to help existing state parties develop.

- Our 2000 Presidential Nominating Convention in Denver, CO., nominated Ralph Nader and Winona LaDuke for President and Vice President.

- In July, 2008, in Chicago, we nominated Cynthia McKinney for President and Rosa Clemente for Vice President.

What we stand for

The mission of the Green Party of the United States is to build the Green Party into a viable political alternative in the United States, and our operating principle has been to keep it simple and focused.

The Green Party has a broad platform that ranges from protecting the environment to our Blue-Green pro-labor agenda to human rights and social justice.

We, the Green Party, see our political and economic progress, and our individual lives, within the context of an evolving, dynamic world.
