Beverly May and Terry Ratliff grew up like kin on opposite sides of a mountain ridge in eastern Kentucky. Now in their fifties, the two find themselves in the midst of a debate dividing their community and the world: who controls, consumes, and benefits from our planet's shrinking supply of natural resources?

DEEP DOWN was funded by the Independent Television Service (ITVS), the Film Arts Foundation, Pacific Pioneer Fund, Banff Mountain Culture Center, Chicken and Egg Pictures, Fledgling Fund, and the MacArthur Foundation, and is in distribution through New Day Films and the Independent Television Service. The film was nominated for an Emmy Award in the category of New Approaches to News and Documentary Filmmaking for its innovative outreach component, a virtual mountaintop removal coal mine created in Second Life. DEEP DOWN was broadcast nationally on Independent Lens, premiered at the Big Sky Film Festival, and was included in the global American Documentary Showcase initiative through the U.S. State Department.

Wilkinson College of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences; Dodge College of Film and Media Arts; Club Doc
